Clinical Innovations

Measuring adequacy of dialysis in inpatients with an acute need for renal replacement therapy	The potential influence of this innovation is a feedback loop to the prescribing nephrologist which enables them to better gauge the adequate dialysis dose. My role was the project manager. Beth Israel Deaconess Medical Center, 2012
Researching current handoff practices and implementing an improved handoff process at NYU	Improved handoff systems (eg, the IPASS system) can have an impact on reducing adverse events. My role was implementing a robust monitoring system to ensure high quality handoff processes. Bellevue Hospital Center, New York, NY 2015.
Improving the patient experience	Through a bundle of intervention including a proposed script for hospitalist physicians and other providers, “face cards” with information about the hospital medicine service and daily schedule, we aim to improve the patient experience. We are measuring name recognition and other measures of communication. Massachusetts General Hospital, ongoing
